

The Arts Council and Dublin City University invite applications from mid-career and established writers for Writer in Residence for the calendar year 2024.

The Arts Council Writer in Residence programme was established to provide a stimulating environment for the resident for the writer, and afford a degree of financial support to concentrate on their own practice. Additionally, the residency brings energy and dynamism to the university, and allows students and faculty to engage with a practicing writer for a concentrated period.

1.1 About the residency

The Writer in Residence will be engaged for the calendar year 2024 and will be situated in the School of English in Dublin City University, with the opportunity to engage with the wider campus.

The residency will be divided into two parts:

1. From January to June 2024 the Writer in Residence will be supported to engage with students and staff. This programme of engagement will be designed by the resident writer, in consultation with the faculty of the university, and could include focused teaching, workshops, mentoring, public events or other activities which bring new energy to the creative writing programme. Contact time with staff and students during this time will be capped at 4 hours per week, and the writer will not be expected to deliver core curriculum.
2. From July onwards, the writer will be supported to concentrate his or her own practice.

The fee to the Writer in Residence is €30,000, with the Arts Council contributing €20,000 and the university €10,000. Dublin City University will provide the Writer in Residence with a dedicated space, where they can conduct their own creative practice, within the university. Dublin City University will also support the residency administratively.

The entire fee will be paid to the writer directly by the Arts Council. It will be paid in two instalments, with a final report by the writer at the conclusion of the residency.

1.2 Arts Council – DCU Writer in Residence

The Writer in Residence will be hosted by the School of English and will be welcomed as a valued and integral member of our small, collegial and dynamic School. He/she will have the ability to offer writing workshops, tutorial sessions, masterclasses, talks, and other kinds of events, to students and staff of DCU, as an additional and complementary part of the university's Creative Writing offering. This may include working, from time to time, with students at undergraduate, Master's, and PhD level, as well as members of staff who could benefit from the Writer in Residence's expertise.

1.3 Who May Apply?

The award is open to mid-career and established writers working in prose fiction, poetry, creative non-fiction, and children's fiction and poetry.

To be eligible to apply, applicants must:

- Be resident in the Republic of Ireland.
- Have a publishing track record in the areas of prose fiction, poetry, creative non-fiction, graphic novels and/or children's fiction and poetry. Applications from writers who have not published in these areas will not be considered. Writers working exclusively as playwrights or screenwriters are not eligible for this residency.
- Be mid-career or established writers. For the purpose of the Arts Council residency programme, mid-career and established is defined by the Arts Council as writers and illustrators with a demonstrable publishing track record, having published at least one full collection, novel or picture book with an independent, recognised publisher.
- The residency is only open to writers who have not undertaken an Arts Council/university residency in 2023. This is to ensure that a range of artists can avail of these unique opportunities.
- In line with the Public Sector Equality and Human Rights Duty, the Arts Council is committed to ensuring that it takes positive policy measures to promote equality of opportunity for all those living in Ireland, regardless of their gender, sexual orientation, civil or family status, religion, age, disability, race or membership of the Traveller Community. Furthermore, the Arts Council notes the ground of socioeconomic background as a further basis for which equality of opportunity must be guaranteed. The Arts Council therefore welcomes applications that are representative of the diversity of Irish society, including but not limited to any of the characteristics outlined above.

1.4 Making an Application

To make an application, writers should provide the following three pieces of information in one PDF document (with the document named in the following format: "Surname_First Name_WiR Application_2024").

1. A detailed proposal of 1-2 pages, which sets out how they would propose to engage with students, staff and the wider campus, and relevant experience to support this approach
2. A one page artist's statement, which describes how the residency could impact on the artist's practice
3. A detailed CV, setting out artistic achievements and accomplishments. This should be no longer than 3 pages.

Applications will be accepted by email only. They should be directed to Dr Darren Murphy at darren.j.murphy@dcu.ie by 5.30 pm on Thursday, 9 November. Applications received after the closing date will not be accepted.

1.5 Assessment Process

Upon receipt of applications, the Arts Council and Dublin City University will determine the eligibility of applications.

Your application will be deemed ineligible, and will not go any further in the process, if any of the following is true:

1. You miss the application deadline.
2. You do not meet the eligibility requirements outlined in 1.3.
3. You do not submit the three pieces of information by email in one PDF document, as outlined in 1.4.

Following this, the Arts Council and Dublin City University will establish a selection committee, which will be made up of one representative from Dublin City University, one from the Arts Council and an external panellist with literary expertise. The selection committee will shortlist applicants based on the following criteria:

- artistic track record of applicant
- quality of idea/approach (referred to above), as outlined in the application, and the potential impact it could make on the relevant university department and university as a whole
- potential impact of residency on writer's own creative practice

A shortlist will be established (of no more than 4 writers). Shortlisted writers will be called to interview in early December. The interview will be held via video conference call. The interview will allow the shortlisted writers to discuss their plans and experience in more detail. The panel will make the final decision based on the above criteria and decisions will be communicated in December 2023.
